 To the Editor

When I received the notification that my Contributing Member subscription was due, I was reminded of the many times I was inspired to work harder after seeing my work in THEMA. I hope that this inspiration is contagious. Keep up the good work.

I wanted to let you know how wowed I was with this particular issue of THEMA [Was That Today? 27:2, 2015]. I mean, some of these pieces stretched the premise of “was that today?” to the limit, and yet they were mostly very enjoyable reads that resonated with me, particularly “A Two-Man Job,” “The Hunt,” and “Premo-nition.” But I think “Death Shift” was my favorite. What a wonderful way to wrap up the book, with a piece that left a reader with such a weighty sense of what a single day may contain. If you get the chance, please pass on my thanks to Mr. Hart for such a wonderful, poignant piece, and enlightening me through his bio that the NY Sanitation Department has its own police force. Who knew?
